THE BLONDE MAN

With a Jolly Red Nose, Tells of His Tribulations.

All on Account of an Unfortunate Complexion—An Argument with a Sarcastic Wife—Appearances Against Him.

[George W. Peck in Peck's Sun.]

"Have a drink?" said a saloon rounder to a blonde man with a red nose who came in to sample the free lunch.

"No thanks, I do not drink." said the red-nosed man.

"Well, then, I would take in the sign," and the saloon rounder and all his friends laughed. The blonde man sat down with the fellows who laughed at him, and after feeling of his his nose, said:

"Gentlemen, that red nose and face of mine is more trouble than all my wealth. I am a temperate man, and never drink intoxicating liquors at all, and yet every time I go out fishing I get sunburned so that I carry a red nose for a month, and it would be hard to convince anybody that I was not a regular old toper. My intimate friends are constantly being asked if I do not 'steam it' pretty bad, and it takes a good deal of their time to stand up for me and deny that I am a drunkard. People are sorry for my wife and children, and boys look upon me as a frightful evidence of what strong drink does for a man; fathers tell their children to beware of the wine cup when I go by, and point to my nose I tell you, boys, it is pretty tough for a man who has not drank a drop for years, and don't want to drink, to be looked upon as a drunkard.

"My wife is one of those sarcastic women who never spoil a good story for relation's sake. One night I attended a Scotch banquet where they had Scotch whisky. You know how it smells. Well, some of it got on the table, and I brushed my sleeve in it, but I did not drink a drop. When I got home, a little after midnight, my key wouldn't work in the door, the first time it ever failed to work, and I had to ring the bell. My wife came down in her ascension robe and opened the door, and she insisted that I had not the key in the keyhole at all. To show her that the key would not work, I held the door open and tried the key, and I hope to die if it did not work all right. Of course I blushed, and my nose was redder than ever, and my wife said, in her peculiar tone, 'Banquets often work that way on men. Some of our best citizens can't find a keyhole when they come home from a banquet.'

"I tried to argue with my wife, there in the hall, and explain to her that she did me an injustice, but she got a smell of that Scotch whisky on my sleeve, and while she knew that I would cut my arm off before I would drink, she said if it was not whisky she smelled, then she never smelled whisky. I was so disgusted that I went up stairs to retire, but when I went to pull my boots off I swow I could not get them off. It was a pair of new tight boots that I only wear to weddings and banquets, and as I tugged and pulled, my face got redder than ever, and my wife looked at me with that calm look, as though she actually thought I was drunk, when she knew better. She told me I could lay a newspaper on the bed to put my feet on, and sleep with my boots on, adding that some of our best citizens occasionally went to bed with their boots on. To cap the climax, I was taken sick at the stomach, from something I had eaten at the banquet, some sort of Scotch pudding that I was not acquainted with, but which a Scotch friend who sat next to me induced me to eat. That settled it, and my wife held up her hands in horror and said, 'Mercy on us, what will come next?' She added that she hoped it would be my boots that came next, so I could retire.

"I was mad, then. It was aggravating, but I woke up the coachman to pull my boots off, when I explained to him that it was a pair of new boots that I wore to the banquet, he laughed and said it was all right. He said the last man he worked for he had to pull his boots off every night, and he didn't think anything of it, because he knew how it was when a man went out to have a little whoop up with the boys. Dear me, I could have murdered the coachman, but I suppose I should not blame him. And do you know, my wife heard the conversation with the coachman, and she just rolled and laughed, and when I came to bed she said, 'Touch not, taste not, handle not, look not upon the Scotch whisky when it is hot, for at last you can't find the key-hole, and you can't get your boots off.' And then she asked me if I hadn't just as soon hang my pug hat up on the floor, because it would get all mussed up if I slept with it on. Bless me if I hadn't forgot to take my hat off, the first time I ever cut such a caper in my life. Then I tried to laugh, and you know how silly a man looks when he tries to laugh a forced laugh, and he feels more like crying.

"Well, my wife kept poking fun at me till I got to sleep, and dreamed I was one of those distillery worms that they rectify spirits through, and in the morning I found that I had my vest on. I think my wife put that vest on me just to have fun. I asked her if she actually thought I drank, and while she knows I did not, she said she only judged from appearances. I was going to go and hang myself, but I thought if I did the papers would say I had committed suicide after a long debauch, from remorse at my conduct, so I didn't. Boys, I would give all I am worth if my face could be as pale as some of you drunkards who are full all the time. What would you advise to me do?" and the poor, red-faced blonde sighed and drank a glass of mineral water.

One of the boys advised him to use face powder, another suggested joining a temperance lodge, and the others were about giving advice when the temperance man rushed out of the saloon suddenly, ran over a woman who was passing and was arrested by a policeman for being drunk and disorderly.

Such Crochety Notions.

[Pittsburg Chronicle.]

The night was dark, cloudy and romantic as he stood under her window at the parental mansion. A rope, chock full of elopement, stretched from the window to the ground. Softly the sash was raised and her angelic form appeared at the casement.

"Is everything ready?" she whispered in a third-scene, box-set voice.

"Yes," he responded in the same theatrical tones.

"Have you the horse and buggy at the corner, a dark lantern, two revolvers, and a double-barreled shotgun?"

"Yes, yes," he replied; "everything is arranged. Slide down."

"And have you hired two men to chase us?"

"Why, no; where's your father?"

"O, pa won't take the trouble. Haven't you the two men engaged?"

"Why, no. What do you want to be chased for?"

"If that's all you know about an elopement I'm not going," and she shut the window down with a bang and went to bed, while the old man, who was peeking through the first-floor blinds, muttered: "Confound such crochety notions; I suppose I'll have to coal up for another winter."

The golden rod is now popular for house decoration. The golden rule would be better.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

A few days since we published the views of Capt. Pim on the Panama Canal and the formidable difficulties that surrounded its construction, and by him regarded as practically useless for a certain class of vessels coming from the Panama side. The views expressed by the gallant captain are being combatted by a Mr. Gorringe, who points out that 6,000,000 of tons passed through the canal in a single year; that its earnings in 1883 amounted to $13,702,413, out of which the Suez Canal Company paid a dividend of 7 3-10 per cent. Mr. Gorringe says that sailing vessels are rapidly giving way to steamers. The Suez Canal has settled this for Europe and Asia, and the Panama Canal will settle it for North and South America. To have allowed the advantage of sailing vessels to govern in the selection of the canal route would have been as great a folly as to build clipper ships for the passenger traffic between New York and Liverpool. Capt. Pim objects to the canal being made at sea level because the altitude at which an abundant supply of water can be had will admit of a canal being constructed with locks much above sea level. But M. De Lesseps proposed a canal at sea level, and for such a canal the stock was subscribed and the money paid, and surely M. De Lesseps and his associates may be allowed to spend their money as they think best. Up to July of this year one-seventeenth of the actual work was done at an expenditure of one-sixth of estimated cost of the whole, so that the canal is likely to cost three times the amount estimated. The amount of excavation for the Panama Canal is more than one-third greater than the Suez Canal cost up to the time that it was opened for traffic, $83,000,000, of which $58,000,000 was expended on actual construction and $25,000,000 on all other expenses. The Panama Canal will cost at the same rate $120,000,000. In digging the Suez Canal the work was carried on in a dry climate. There was no rain, there were no river torrents to contend with. It is possible that the floods at the Panama Canal may at times impede the work already done. The canal is necessarily made through the lowest part of the country and this is naturally the outlet of the rainfall which, during the last year, was nearly ten feet, more than three times the rainfall in our latitude. M. De Lesseps will have his name forever associated with the two most stupendous works of modern times, and the two works which are likely to revolutionize the trade of the world, for any railways that are ever likely to be constructed will not take the trade of Asia and Australia from these canals.

THERE were thirty-two failures in Canada reported to Bradstreet's during the second week of November, as compared with thirty-one in the preceding week, and with thirty-two, twenty-two, and nine, respectively in the corresponding weeks of 1883, 1882, and 1881. The same agency reports 166 failures in the United States last week, as compared with 205 in the preceding week, and with 219, 149, and forty-nine, respectively, in the corresponding weeks of 1883, 1882, 1881. About 84 per cent. were those whose capital was less than $5,000. It is a significant fact, and illustrates the relative prosperity of the eastern as compared with the most western province of the confederation, that few if any failures are ever reported from British Columbia. Our business men don't go "ballooning" or "Kite-flying."

OUR Canadian boatmen are doing wonders in Egypt. They work their boats with marvellous skill and rapidity. The troops cheer them from the banks and declare that without such aid they could not move on. We should be proud of this. It is the best answer to those everlasting croakers who proclaimed that the voyageurs would be a failure in that peculiar climate.

THE Port Arthur Sentinel, referring to the development of the Vancouver coal mines, remarks: "We are glad to receive these evidences of the development of Canadian resources in the extreme west, but believe the present will be nothing compared with the hum all along the line that will follow the completion through between the oceans of the C. P. R."

MUST BE CAREFUL.

The Republican papers feel very sore over their recent defeat, and are doing their utmost to renew the bitter feeling between the North and South. What the outcome will be it is difficult to tell, but one thing is certain. President Cleveland will have to be very cautious in the way of making appointments, or the Democrats will never win another victory. The San Francisco Post, the most partisan Republican journal on the Pacific coast says:

"California, more than any other State, will feel the chill of neglect. From Kentucky there will come a man as Collector of the Port, and his employees will be imported. The Collector of Internal Revenue may be a gentleman from North Carolina, and the railroads will be enriched by the fares of the members of his staff, who will come from the sunny South. The Superintendent of the Mint will come from Alabama and bring his retinue with him. The Assistant Treasurer will come from Tennessee with his shotgun, his bowie knife and his staff. The United States Surveyor General will arrive from Mississippi, with a magnolia in his buttonhole and a knife in his boot, and behind him will march his clerks and draftsmen. In fact, the inspectors of everything, the collectors of everything, and every one of the great army of federal officeholders will come from the land of airs and alligators.

REV. JOSEPH COOK never rushes from one extreme to the other, nevertheless he will spend the winter among the "blue-noses" of Nova Scotia. He will thus be in a position to compare the extremes climatic, in winter, and the extremes geographic, and it is safe to conclude that his impressions will not be unfavorable to the maritime province of the west.

SENSATIONAL LIBEL CASE.

A Daughter of Chief Justice Coleridge Expelled From Her Father's Home.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A noteworthy libel case was begun to-day. Frank Mantell Adams, a leading London Barrister, sues Bernard Coleridge, son of Chief Justice Coleridge. Adams conducted his own case. His opening speech stated that he was engaged to a daughter of Judge Coleridge. Coleridge objected to him for a son-in-law, and induced his son Bernard to write a letter to his daughter libelling him (Adams). The young lady turned the letter over to her betrothed. This led to her expulsion from her father's house and expunging her name from her father's will. The defendant entered a plea that the letter was a privileged communication.

Waiting for Reinforcements.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Advices from Tamsui of Tuesday state that Admiral Courbet still remains at Keelung, and is unable to advance until reinforced. Chinese labor is scarce. French soldiers are employed in coaling the ships.

Will Submit the Plans.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—In the Commons to-day Gladstone stated the Government was submitting its financial plans regarding Egypt to the powers, and was, therefore unable to disclose them.

Peace Negotiations Suspended.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Times' Shanghai dispatch says: Peace negotiations have been suspended. The French have made overtures to English and American pilots on the Yang Tse river for aid, and the pilots ask 40,000 taels, or about $56,000 each for their services. The Chinese complain of this action on the part of citizens of neutral countries.

Canadian Dispatches.

Federal Bank Meeting.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20.—At a meeting to-day of the shareholders of the Federal Bank, the general manager submitted a long report showing the losses to be unexpectedly large. He recommended a reduction of the capital from $3,000,000 to $1,250,000. Special reference was made to the principal items of loss, viz: Michigan lumber account, lock-up in Manitoba, and loss by Commercial Loan and Stock Co.

A Cool Proposal.

QUEBEC, Nov. 20.—In a letter to a local paper to-night, a retired paymaster of the Royal Navy suggests that the Dominion propose to the Imperial Government to transfer Jamaca to the United States on condition of the States giving Canada a small part of New York State and so much of Maine as will square Canadian territory by the forty-fifth degree of north latitude.

Another Financial Trouble.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—The Toronto planing mills company are in difficulty. Liabilities $20,000. The statement of the trustees of Jas. Campbell & Sons, wholesale stationers, shows liabilities $363,130; assets $205,221.

Pacific Coast News.

DeYoung's Condition.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—At 9 o'clock this evening DeYoung's condition was apparently unchanged. Dr. Murphy, family physician in attendance, stated this afternoon there had been considerable hemorrhage and that DeYoung was a very sick man. He declined to give any opinion as to the result but said the chief danger lay either in blood poisoning or hemorrhage from artery. The latter fear is based upon the supposition that the subclavian artery has been injured. "I cannot offer any definite opinion for several days yet; at least five days must elapse before danger of hemorrhage from artery is passed.

LATER.

11 p. m.—DeYoung's physician reports his patient's condition slightly more favorable at this hour than at 8 o'clock in the evening.

De Young's Condition Serious.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—The condition of De Young, proprietor of the Chronicle, shot by Adolph Spreckles, on Wednesday night, is becoming more serious. He passed a restless night and his sleep was broken by stomach trouble. The fever is higher. He is resting easier this morning.

OFFICIAL COUNT.

Yellow Jack.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The police have discovered a case of yellow fever in a sailors' boarding house.

Hard Times for Operatives.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 21.—Early in the week manufacturers feared they would have to shut down their mills next week again. During the week, however, the market assumed a strong tone and the mills will all run next week, except on Thanksgiving Day. It is the general opinion of manufacturers that more shut downs will have to be made, and that the coming winter will necessarily be a hard one for operatives. The manufacturers, said yesterday that the reduction of 10 per cent. on the wages of operatives would undoubtedly be made before January 1st if no material change occurs in the condition of the market.

An Important Trust.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Nov. 21.—Congressman Tucker, recently elected from the Tenth district by the Democrats, has been appointed guardian for the minor children of the late President Garfield. His trust includes all property owned by General Garfield in Virginia. Mrs. Garfield in making the request referred to the kind relations which existed between Mr. Tucker and her husband.

Reduction in Wages.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 21.—The proprietors of the McKee flint glass works have notified the pressers and finishers that their wages will be reduced 10 per cent. on Dec. 1st. The workmen will meet in a few days to consider the advisability of accepting the reduction. The employees of Robinson, Rea & Co.'s foundry have also been notified of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages, to take effect next Monday. The bolt, blacksmith and machine shops of Oliver Bros. & Phillips, Tenth street, were shut down last night on account of a slack in orders and over production.

The Bankrupt Law.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—A meeting opened to-day at noon of the Board of Trade, for the discussion of the national bankrupt law on the excessive coinage of silver and the reciprocity treaties with Mexico and Canada. All business on the exchanges in the city were represented. Addresses so far have been made by Senator Hoar, Congressman Banner, Leopold Morse, and Collins Taber on the national bankruptcy bill, and by B. Nourse against the coinage of silver dollars.

Business Failures.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Business failures throughout the country the last seven days were 277. This is a striking increase as compared with last week, when the total was 236, and for the previous week 214. The increase is mainly in the Western and Southern States.

Foreign Dispatches.

Gordon's Army.

CAIRO, Nov. 20.—A man who arrived here last evening from Khartoum, states that Gen. Gordon has in his army 2000 Turks and 6000 blacks, besides a large number of Arabs. He has also a plentiful supply of provisions and ammunition. The Mahdi's people are deserting and fleeing to the hills, having lost faith in the false prophet.

Students Indignant.

MADRID, Nov. 20.—The students of the university are thoroughly incensed against the bishops for censuring one of the professors for advocating the liberty of education. The students made manifest their disapprobation by thronging the streets. Precautions have been taken to prevent a renewal of the disorder.

A Chinese Attack.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Gen. Briere de Lisle, commander of the French forces in Tonquin, telegraphs that the Chinese made a vigorous attack on the French gunboats, killing one sailor and wounding eight. Eight thousand Chinese are descending Red river to renew the attack.

Troops Moving to the Front.

CAIRO, Nov. 21.—A man who arrived here yesterday evening from Khartoum says that Mahdi's position is eighteen hours march from Khartoum. Disease is making great ravages among Mahdi's followers, fully 100 dying daily. Sheikh Morgana, with a large force arrived at a point midway between Kassala and Berber, to lend assistance to General Gordon. Advices from Wady Halfa states that the British troops arriving there are departing for the front with noteworthy rapidity. The Essex and Cornwall regiments are now en route to Dongola. An advance beyond Dongola will be impossible for a month.

Will Force the Blockade.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 21.—The Chinese ironclads Cho Lung and Yueng Wei arrived from the inland and will force the French blockade off the island of Formosa.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

[THE TIMES wishes it to be distinctly understood that it is in no way responsible for, and does not necessarily agree with its correspondents.]

Justice to Hackmen.

EDITOR TIMES—In justice to the hackmen of this city I would suggest that if the wharfingers, or whoever it may be, that keeps them from going down to the Sound steamers when they arrive at the dock, should insist in making the proprietors of hotels either pay for a solicitor's license, or not allow them to solicit at the steamers for guests for their house. A hackman earns what paltry little he gets by being a servant for the travelling public, and working in all sorts of weather, and I don't think it hardly fair that they should be deprived of going down to the steamers and permission given to the high, aristocratic hotel keepers of this fair city to solicit at the steamers and not pay a regular license. All we poor hackmen ask is JUSTICE and FAIR PLAY.

HACKMAN.

VICTORIA, Nov. 31, 1884.

The new time table on the Northern between Portland and St. Paul will go into effect on Sunday next. The time of arrival and departure of trains on the Kalama branch will be changed, trains leaving Portland about 9 a. m. and arriving about 4:20 p. m.

Another Lecturer.

Rev. G. H. Greer, of Portland, arrived by steamer to-day and will deliver a lecture in the City Hall to-morrow night, subject, "Through Methodism into Unitarianism." Dr. Tolmie introduced the Reverend gentleman to a number of the citizens to-day.

No Opium.

The custom house officials at San Francisco have completed their search of the City of Brooklyn, which sailed recently from Seattle coal laden. It was thought that there were several hundred dollars worth of opium on board, which it was thought had been smuggled from Victoria and brought over on board the Eliza Anderson. Officers sailed to San Francisco on board of her and the unloading of the coal was eagerly watched, but no sign of smuggled opium was discovered. Nine men worked night and day for the last two weeks and searched every nook and cranny in the ship but discovered naught.

DOES DEATH END ALL.

Lecture by Joseph Cook on the Evidences of a Future State.

The Rev. Joseph Cook delivered his celebrated lecture on "Does Death End All?" in Philharmonic Hall, last evening to a large audience. Mr. N. Shakespeare, M. P., acted as chairman and introduced the lecturer.

He at once commenced to combat the theory held by some, that death is the end of all things. In the first place, he said, we have within us an ineradicable feeling or instinct, pointing to a future life. This feeling is possessed by all, and is a part of our being. If men give up the fear of a judgment it would be almost impossible to govern. There was something which did not die with the disorganization of the body. The relation of this something, which is usually called the soul, to the material substance is by materialists said to be that of harmony to the harp, but the relation was more that of the harper to the harp. The testimony of the greatest minds of all ages was that there is within the human breast something which points to a future existence. When Socrates had taken poison and lay on his dying couch, he said to his followers who were contemplating him "When you put this body beneath the ground, do not say that you have buried Socrates. You will bury only his body; the Socrates that you knew will still exist in some other life." Three kinds of reasoning would be adopted in discussing the matter, namely, evidence from conscience, physiology, and revelation. The two first would be entirely separate from the latter.

CONSCIENCE.

Shakespeare had written some of the ablest treatises of conscience in his Hamlet, Macbeth, and Richard III. The celebrated soliloquy "Conscience doth make cowards of us all," fills us with the idea of a future state from which we cannot escape. Herbert Spencer held that all our instincts and tendencies are the result of education and not an inate principle. According to his theory this belief in a future is merely the result of a tendency so to believe originating in one of our ancestors, and by the laws of natural selection, and the survival of the fittest, handed down to us as an inheritance. By this reasoning had this combination of circumstances not occurred to our ancestor to cause him to think that there was a future somewhere, we now would not be troubled by the conscience which is constantly pointing to a future life. The futility of this style of reasoning could be shown by applying it to the birds or fish which are taught by instinct to seek suitable climates. Instinct teaches the birds to seek warmer climates, and the fish to seek the ocean, but should they refuse on the grounds that this feeling was the result of training, or feeling traceable to some ancestors, they would all perish when the storms of winter descended. Man has been created with certain desires and there must be something to correspond. Whatever organs we have we find something to match them. For the eyes we have light, for the ear, sound. When we find a migratory instinct, we find a country to match it, and for every unborn tendency there will always be found something provided by God to match it. If human life has been brought into existence with tastes and impulses and future desires and nothing to correspond, God, himself must be malevolent. But conscience is so made that when it acts freely it raises the question of rewards and punishments. As the birds, trusting to their instinct, winged their way to southern climes, so the human race could trust implicitly on Divine promises of a blissful future.

THE SCIENTIFIC EVIDENCES.

By means of charts, the lecturer gave illustrations of the structure and growth of animal life. Living tissues are composed of cells, and these cells are formed by a substance which has the property of taking foreign matter, changing its form and throwing it off in another form. This substance is called, bioplasm, or life stuff. There is no difference between the bioplastic properties of the cells of different tissues, but very different results are produced. Some cells throw off a muscle, some a tendon, some a nerve. Some power must direct this process. The magna charta exists in a bushel of type, in possibility but not in activity. Every change must have a cause, and some hand must make the arrangement. In the process of weaving, various fabrics are produced, but there must be a directing hand which precedes the action of the shuttle. So in the weaving of the human frame, the life or directing power which forces the bioplastic shuttles to weave the tissues which form a man or animal, and which exists until dissolution, keeping the shuttle at work weaving material for repairs, precedes the first movements in the process of weaving. If before the beginning of the process, the directing power of life exists, can we say that it perishes when the organism which it has formed decays? Can we say, when we have shown that the spirit, the life or directing power exists before the beginning of our material existence, that death, or the disorganization of our material bodies, ends all?

TESTIMONY OF REVELATION.

These evidences, the lecturer claimed, could be compared to the light of the moon and stars, but the Bible furnished the bright sunlight. He believed that we had within us the germ of a spiritual body. The teachings of the Bible as to a future life are corroborated by natural science, and the assertion of the Holy Book is that death does not end all.

What's in a Name?

During the course of his lecture, Rev. Mr. Cook when quoting from the great poet, Shakespeare, referred to the fact, that Mr. N. Shakespeare, M. P., who occupied the chair, had the same name and came from Staffordshire, and might possibly be a relative. Taking him by the hand the lecturer said, "Were I even distantly connected with the celebrated bard of Stratford-on-Avon I would consider I possessed the proudest blood known to modern civilization."

The Portland News says: It is said that there is only eighteen feet of water at the mouth of the Willamette river. The channel should be deepened, to allow ships of greater draught to come up to this city without lightering.

A young man named Alex. Sloan, in the stationary department of the House of Commons, at Ottawa, recently died suddenly. He accidentally took the wrong bottle of medicine in which was a poisonous acid, and death resulted from the same.

An American paper says: The New York papers are complaining because the British postmaster general persists in sending the mails for this country in the slow steamships, while our mails are sent out in the very swiftest ocean going vessels.

Over 100,000 women and girls, it is said, make a living in the streets of Paris. They are licensed by the government and sell different articles. Thirty-five thousand of them are under 18, 17,000 under 15, and 5000 of them little girls under 13 years of age.

The Italian steamer Perseo arrived at Buenos Ayres on the 18th inst, with a large number of Italian passengers. The government transport on sighting the steamer signalled her to stop, and she was ordered to leave Argentine waters immediately, notwithstanding the protest of the captain that he was in want of coal. It is thought there is cholera aboard the vessel.

One of the largest single contracts ever made by the British Government was that awarded to Armour & Co., of Chicago, for 1,000,000 pounds of corned beef and 1,000 cases of bacon for the army in Egypt. It is stated that half the contract was fulfilled by delivery at Woolwich, within an hour after the order was given, and on the same day the rest of the beef started from Chicago by flying freight train for New York.

Mr. Archibald Blue, of the Bureau of Industries, is appointed Assistant Minister of Agriculture in the place of Professor Buckland, resigned. Mr. J. Leckie, acting bursar at the Central Prison, is appointed to the Chief Clerkship of the Bureau of Industries. Mr. George Wheeler, ex-M. P., is made Bursar of the Central Prison. Mr. Wheeler has received his reward for resigning to make room for Mr. J. D. Edgar.

The Castleton Troupe.

Miss Kate Castelton and her company of excellent performers arrived on the Geo. E. Starr this afternoon from the Sound and will give their first performance this evening at Philharmonic hall, "At Sea," being the title of the piece. Miss Castleton has been playing at Portland and other places in the Northwest recently, where she met with the most flattering success. Wherever she appears a crowded house invariably greets her, and her excellent acting is well worthy of the attention she receives. There are but few actresses who have won more favor in the States and Canada than has this charming young lady, and the flattering success which she meets, is justly earned. Among the artists composing her troupe Miss Ethel Lynton and Mr. Ferdinand Urban are the two best and favorably known, and are undoubtedly very fine. It is their first appearance in British Columbia and they will doubtless make many friends. Victorians are not slow to appreciate good acting, and they will give Miss Castleton and her excellent troupe a cordial reception.

The Editor of "Truth."

"For God's sake read it, I am in need of bread," said a ragged down-at-the-heel literary tramp to Labouchere of London Truth, who poses as a great critic of literary matters. "Labby" was impatient to be away, and had at first refused to even read the poem, but he did so, and then declared that it was trash, saying: "You can make more money as a rag-picker or sailor than trying to worm your way into journalism, with no ability to back you." "Labby" refused to give the author a pound for the "stuff," but offered him a few shillings in charity. Then the tramp threw off his disguise, and lo! there stood "Labby's" great club crony, Bret Harte, whom he had begged to write a poem for him. He would have been glad then to get the "trash" at any price, but alas! he did not, nor will he ever again get any of Harte's matter.

Capt. Yarnar, of the bark Fleetwing, is registered at the Oriental.

Mr. James Laidlaw, proprietor of a cannery at New Westminster, is at the Oriental.

Will Divide Shipments.

A railroad journal says that the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company is to divide rough shipments eastward between the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific in proportion to the business it receives from each. On December 23d a special meeting of the stockholders of the O. R. & N. Co. is to be held, at which, among other questions to be voted on, is the authorization of negotiations for the transfer of the road by lease or sale to the Central Pacific Railroad, indicating that the latter corporation may come into competition with the Union Pacific for Oregon and Washington business.

ALASKAN INDIANS.

Cremation Practiced Among Some of the Tribes—Curiosities.

A correspondent writing from Alaska to the San Francisco Chronicle gives the following interesting particulars concerning the natives:

The Thlinkets are the most superstitious of all Alaskans. Practicing cremation for years, and still inclined to dispose of their dead in that manner, they believe in the presence of evil spirits and in the power of their Shamans, or medicine men, to frighten away diseases and all disorders. Originally the only religion which they had was a mythological one, in which Kiyekh, spirits of the air; Tshkiyekh, spirits of the earth; Tekiyekh, spirits of the water, and Yekh, minor spirits, were considered all powerful actualities. Later, however, there is less veneration offered these mystical imaginings, and those who do not believe in the Christian God are without convictions of any kind, though they still call in the Shaman when ill, and often throw gifts to the spirits of the waters when their boats get stranded on the rocks. Polygamy is largely practiced, and there is great unchastity among the women. As soon as a girl is born she is taught to believe in her inferiority to man, and is sold for a certain amount of money, or its value, in her infancy, to be claimed when old enough.

THLINKET CURIOSITIES.

Thlinket curiosities, such as carved bowls, pipes, totem poles and spoons, are becoming exceedingly rare. The best specimens have already found their way to museums and private hands, and only the baskets, made of fibers, and the bracelets, hammered out of silver half-dollars, are readily worth the money that they cost. In the past, however, Alaska was well stocked with home-made goods, and the household implements were often elaborately carved with the totemic designs one sees to-day upon the poles at Wrangel. A totem is a family coat of arms. Everyone belongs either to the raven, the whale or the bear family, whose crest is represented by the carved animal. The totem poles found at many of the villages are often thirty feet high and contain rudely carved images of the whale, bear and raven, showing the various families from which the present owner of the pole is descended. There is not the attention given to the totems at present, however, which there was years ago, and the poles at Wrangel are weather beaten and tottering. The custom, also, of engraving a man's crest on every article that he owns has been largely done away with. But there is the same totemic relationship, which is stronger than blood, and in quarrels the opponents array themselves on the side of their totem, which is always that of the wife.

Touting Lawyers in London.

One of the stock phrases of magistrates is "that they have no power to interfere." The other day a woman, who went to the Thames Police Court to take out a summons for assault, was led off by a tout to the office of a solicitor, who charged her half a guinea and procured her the summons, for which she had to pay two shillings extra. When this lady subsequently discovered that she could have got the summons for herself, she complained in court and wanted her half-guinea back. The magistrate agreed that she had been plundered, condemned the solicitor's conduct as disgraceful, but added that he could give her no help. This was quite a mistake on his part, for a magistrate can easily discover from the police who are the solicitors that tout, and he has the power to forbid such men from practising in his court. So many evils have to be endured because it is nobody's certain business to right them, that one can have no patience with abuses which grow because those who might extirpate them have not the firmness to do so. Touting at police courts is a serious nuisance, as it tends to bring poor and ignorant people into the clutches of the less reputable among lawyers. These men never consider a client's case on its merits. Their only object being to run up costs, they aggravate strife, and, when they can, turn little cases into big ones. Their demeanor and language in Court is often that of mere bullies. Nervous witnesses cower under their bluster, and magistrates, for some incomprehensible reason, submit to their rudeness, even when it rebounds from the witness-box on to the bench. We must observe that in this respect there is a great difference between the Courts of stipendiaries and those of unpaid justices. The aldermen at the Mansion House and Guildhall preside with great dignity over their Courts, and so do country justices over theirs. In spite of the jibes which the Great Unpaid have to suffer whenever they make mistakes, it must be said of them that they lend no countenance to lawyers of doubtful respectability, and that they know very well how to protect complainants against "plunder" and witnesses against intimidation.

Small Advertisements.

Because a merchant cannot afford to insert a half column advertisement in a newspaper is no reason why he should not advertise. All heavy advertisers began with small announcements. The great merchant princes, like A. T. Stewart, spent at the beginning only small sums each year—a certain per cent. of their income. It is a mistake to suppose small advertisements are not seen. They are not only see, but as a rule read by all those who seen them, because their contents can be taken at a glance. Merchants who do not advertise should try the experiment, especially in the dull season. The public will not seek a business man. He must interest the public and make it seek him.

The Northern Pacific.

Rumors regarding the completion of the Cascade branch of the Northern Pacific Railroad are very conflicting. Some of the journals published in the territory and Oregon are of the opinion that it will be many years before the line is in operation, while others hold views to the contrary. The Tacoma News says: "The Cascade division of the Northern Pacific Railroad has recently received some 300 Chinese recruits as laborers, and work will probably progress rapidly until the completion of this division. The late campaign is not likely to affect railroad work in the slightest degree."

The Disabled Bark.

The bark Fleetwing, lumber laden bound to Melbourne, which was towed in Esquimalt yesterday afternoon by the Alexander is making water very fast, and the pumps are kept going pretty steadily. At ten o'clock to-morrow morning a survey will be made of the vessel, to ascertain the extent of her injuries, and see whether it will be necessary to discharge her cargo. A diver may go down and examine her bottom, if the damage cannot otherwise be discovered. The vessel is said to be uninsured.

Judge Blanford, of Georgia, regards speculations in wheat as worse than poker. He says he cannot see how any man could fool away months waiting to see stocks go up or down when he might fill a flush and rake in a jack-pot in thirty seconds.

A Harlem man who recently joined the church was heard to utter, as his shiny new beaver fell in a mudhole: "Wouldn't you hear some tall swearing if I hadn't been converted last week."

On reading in a newspaper that a piece of fresh beef bound on the face every night would make the complexion fair, a Chicago drummer tried the experiment. He put a quarter of beef on each cheek and went to bed, and next morning found that the brass in his cheek had formed verdigris on the beef and poisoned two yellow cats and a bobtailed poodle that had been nibbling the beef.

The little steamer bearing the above name is nearly ready for service. It is thought that by Monday next a trial trip will be made, when her qualities for speed will be demonstrated. THE COTTON FIELD HAND.

(Edgard Willett.)

Dese rows ob cotton am berry hard to hoe,
'Long ob de shinin' ob de hot summer sun.
Wish I owned de fields whar de cotton plants grow,
So's to take it easy, wid plenty ob fun.
Old 'oman's got to lib, picaninnies too,
Hard work a plenty fur field hands to do.

Mule 'tween de cotton rows kickin' up a dus';
Got to keep an eye peeled 'ginst de critter's heels;
Sun's jest a-b'lin', too, gittin' wuss an' wuss.
Wish dar wasn't no time but sleepin' time an' meals.
Corn pone am mighty tough, hog meat fat;
Little use o' libin' jes for such as dat.

Sun come an' rain come, workin' all de day;
Cotton crop on hand, too, all the yeah round;
Got to keep a-treshin', hain't no time to play;
Rest a plenty some time, down in de ground.
Wish I had a dollah fur ebery drop o' sweat—
Wonner ef it's Christian so to fuss and fret.

Jacob's gittin' old an' pore, hain't got long to go.
Laws-a-massy! dar's de chillun, comin' home from school!
Dat's wot makes de cotton easy 'nough to hoe,
Kinder puts an edge, too, on de dullest tool.
Light's a-breakin', shorely, far away ahead;
Reckon it'll shine out w'en dis darky's dead.

Hard work a-groppin' and grobblin' in de dark,
Mighty slow a-tryin' to find de way at las',
W'en de work an' worry hurts de wust, den bark!
Hear the bells a-ringin' and de school chillun pass!
Hard work an' dark ways, but dar's lots o' light;
See de chillun's faces, fresh an' glad an' bright!

Lawdy! how de sweat comes, fallin' like de rain!
Wish I had a dollah row fur ebery big drop;
Bendin' ober cotton gibs de back a strain;
Jacob's goin' down'ard, but de chillun's gittin' up.
Hard work an' dark ways, all de yeah around;
But de light is breakin' w'en de school bells sound.

END OF TWO MONSTER SHIPS.

Vessels That Never Left the Ways—The Java and Colossus.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

For a few days there will be some life and activity in the Brooklyn navy yard, for a large number of workmen have already been engaged to destroy two immense hulks known as the Colossus and the Java. For the past twenty years these two uncompleted vessels have never been moved from the ways on which they were originally built, and the very timbers on which they lie are almost rotten from long exposure. The Java and Colossus have always attracted a great deal of attention from visitors, and from their battered appearance many people supposed that the two ships must have been through some frightful naval combats.

The Colossus was to be a double turreted monitor carrying four fifteen inch guns. She was designed by Benjamin Delano, one of the most skillful naval constructors of his day. Two millions and a half were to be expended on her, but when the war was more advanced orders were received from Washington to stop work on the Colossus. This was done, and many men in consequence thrown out of employment. The ship's engines had just been put in her, and she was all ready for launching when the men ceased work, and nothing has been done to her from that day to this.

"What about the Java?"

"The Java was designed for a fast steam cruiser for the purpose of pursuing such swift vessels as the Alabama and others of her class. She was to be capable of attaining a speed of seventeen knots an hour; in fact she might have equaled the speed of the Arizona. The Java was mainly built for speed, and all her woodwork was of the best white oak. She would have made a formidable mate to the Colossus, and especially in those old war times the two vessels could easily have withstood the attack of any other two men-of-war. It is a pity to see them go without having even touched the salt water, but then the space that these two old hulks occupy is very valuable and will be used for something else, I hope, more useful and ornamental."

"When are you going to begin the work of destruction?"

"We have commenced to demolish the Colossus already, and as soon as we take on some more help we will lay the Java low. It will take about five months altogether to break up the two ships."

Tenement-House Life.

[Cor. New York Tribune.]

Standing in the Bowery and looking across the site of the old Windsor theatre, one faces the rear of an immense tenement-house. At night every window is aglow with lights which by contrast with the gas and electric lights of the street you recognize at once as the cheap oil lamps of the poor. There are some eight floors of this house, and it is not less than 100 feet wide, or five old houses in a row thrown into one. On each floor of these five houses are probably eight rooms like the ones seen at the rear—a little larger, a little better, perhaps; and each giving shelter to a family.

The average, I am told, is four to a room in such buildings. That means 250 persons to a house, or 1,250 human beings crowded into the one tenement which the five old buildings form. This means that a population greater than that of any one of thousands of incorporated towns and villages in this country is crowded into a single building on a plot of ground 100 feet square. Think of it in those torrid days with the thermometer at 90 degrees, and don't grumble any longer at your own fate. If one only looks at it in this spirit one can find a great deal of satisfaction in reading paragraphs like this showing what a miserable and unhappy world it is that we live in.

A Hopleure from Bostiug.

A thin man wearing eyeglasses entered a Harlem restaurant a few days ago and asked:

"Have you any beans?"

"Yes, sir."

"Round, fat beans?"

"Yes, sir."

"With a brown crust on them?"

"Yes, sir."

"I'll take a plate."

"Ere Billy," shouted the proprietor through a hole in the wall. "Tell your mother to dish h'up some beans from the black pot. 'Ere's a hepicure from Bosting."

Won't Use Coal.

The Russian government has sought thus far in vain, to bring about the general use of coal in that country instead of wood, in order to save the forests. As though no such thing as a good stove or heater was known, a prize has been offered for the best apparatus for utilizing coal in government offices.

The Smell of Boiling Cabbage.

[Cor. New York Sun.]

Here is a piece of information for housekeepers. We have tried it several times. Everyone knows how disagreeable the odor of cooking cabbage is. All your neighbors can tell when you are going to have cabbage for dinner. If you put a small piece of red pepper in with the cabbage there will be no smell. The pepper absorbs the odor of the cabbage. Don't put in too large a piece of pepper, however, or the cabbage will be hot.

Vital Questions!!!!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?
And they will tell you unhesitatingly

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:
"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—
